

The Rockwell Collins “Road Show” came to the sixth grade science classes at Lincoln on March 18th. Engineers Doug Pauls and Matt Hammand did several demonstrations in the classes to encourage students to enter engineering as a career. The engineers also talked about many of the different fields of engineering and what they do that students might not have known about. At the end of each class the students were treated to marshmallows that had been frozen in liquid nitrogen! Pictured from left to right are: Antonio, Brenna, Lindsay watching Rockwell Collins Engineers Doug Pauls and Matt Hammand.